Title	Culturally Sensitive Material Policy

UBC Library is committed to respecting the values and spiritual beliefs of the cultures represented in its digital collections.

We are aware that our digital collections may contain items that are important to the originating communities, and continue to affect the values and beliefs of those communities.

We recognize that these digital objects may embody cultural rights, values, knowledge, and ideas which are not owned or possessed by the library, but are retained by the originating communities.

The Library is developing principles and a process to address concerns about such objects from originating communities.

In the meantime, if you have questions about culturally sensitive materials in Open Collections, please contact the UBC Library Digitization Centre at digitization.centre@ubc.ca
