

Multiple Ability Task:

Students are required to read a section of their textbook. I will conduct a pre-reading, reading and post-reading activity.

During the pre-reading activity students are required to preview the text and discuss as a class what they think the chapter will be about.

During the reading activity, students are told to read the text and summarize, in less and two sentences, what each section is about, if students are done early, they will be directed to answering the question, what is this chapter focusing on when it is discussing the Iroquois people? What is missing?

During the post-reading activity, students in pairs will be asked to identify the language used to describe the Iroquois and if they are not included students will be asked to research elsewhere, for example to internet.
