

Bridget Trerise

I am an undergraduate UBC Forestry student from the Vancouver area, and I am now in my fourth year of the Forest Resources Management program. I took APBI 200 during my first year of forestry studies. This course helped me to appreciate many types of soils during my summertime employment as an industrial tree-planter in northern British Columbia and Alberta, and as a silviculture surveyor on northern Vancouver Island. I have also enjoyed applying my soil knowledge to coursework throughout my forestry degree. I look forward to continuing to use this knowledge in the future. I am happy to be reconnected with APBI 200 as a PASS Leader so that I can help other students to succeed.