

1 Too many requests for last minute extensions?

Direct students to our Assignment Calculator which breaks down research papers into easy, manageable steps.

assignmentcalculator.library.ubc.ca

2 Student discussions lacking a critical approach to the material?

Send your students to our Critical Thinking Toolkit to break down the process and habits of thinking critically.

learningcommons.ubc.ca/critical-thinking

3 Students struggling with presentations in your course?

Send them to our Presentation Skills Toolkit to learn how to organize and deliver a compelling presentation.

learningcommons.ubc.ca/presentation

4 Want to support good note-taking habits?

Send students to our Note Taking Toolkit to learn how to deduct a lecture's main points and also explore material organization.

learningcommons.ubc.ca/note-taking

5 Office hours not drawing a crowd?

Our Profs and TAs Toolkit has tips on overcoming initial nervousness many students, especially first-years, experience when talking with a Professor or TA.

learningcommons.ubc.ca/profs-and-tas

6 Students having trouble getting started with their research?

Our Research Toolkit has tips on gathering material and focusing your research paper with mind mapping tools.

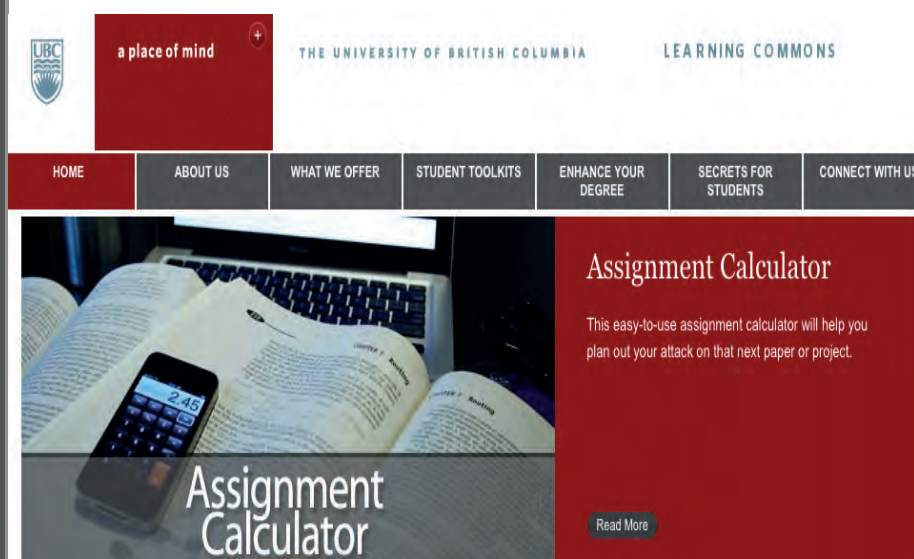

learningcommons.ubc.ca/research

7 Students complaining about too much to do in too little time?

Send your students to our Time Management Toolkit to help them effectively manage their time, a skill that is necessary for every student's academic success.

learningcommons.ubc.ca/time-management

7 Things for Faculty on the Learning Commons Website

We know that learners will follow up with learning resources recommended by their professors and TAs. The Learning Commons makes it easy for you to connect with the learning resources that may be most useful to your students.

Our online resources support group work, mind mapping, presentation skills and a host of other learning activities that your students may be engaged in. We've highlighted a few resources we think you may find useful and we'd be happy to work with you to develop resources specific to your context.

Visit us at:
learningcommons.ubc.ca

