

Original Language Citation Guide for Japanese Resources

General Formatting Rules:

This guide is a hybrid system based on the needs and preferences of UBC's Asian Studies Department. The style presented here reflects common practices at Japanese universities and those used in academic publications. It is possible to adjust the citation style to follow another scheme or the requirements of an instructor.

Specific Formatting Rules:

No spaces are inserted between the various elements within a Japanese citation, including between the family and given names of an author, editor, or translator. Indent the second and subsequent lines in a citation with two spaces.

Use 『』 to bracket the titles of longer works (books, journals, films), and 「」 for shorter works (articles, chapters, webpages). Separate multiple authors or editors by inserting a ・ mark in between their names.

The following special characters are used in citations:

編	appears after the name of the editor(s)
訳	appears after the name of the translator(s)
監督	appears after the name of the director
出演	appears after the name of a performer
アクセス	date of access
原著	originally published
第○巻	volume
第○号	issue

Dates follow a (Gregorian year) 年 (month) 月 (day) 日 format, where appropriate.

Again: these guidelines are meant to be a starting point for handling Japanese script in your academic writing. When citing types of materials that do not appear in this list, try to extrapolate based on the examples below. Most importantly, always consult closely with your instructor.
